

Heartworms infect cats as often as dogs.

Grounded or Unfounded?

FACT: Recent studies show cats are infected by heartworms nearly as frequently as dogs, although the course of disease differs. Two entities occur in cats: heartworm-associated respiratory disease (HARD) caused by larval and juvenile heartworm deaths and the classic disease caused by adult worms.

BEST STRATEGY: Both cats and dogs should receive heartworm preventive 12 months a year.

Protection is priceless.

Choose year-round heartworm prevention for your pet.
